Dedication

To him whom we honored as a soldier, respected as an instructor, and esteemed as a sincere friend: MAJOR JOHN ANDERSON, U. S. A., this book is respectfully dedicated by the Class of 1907

*John Anderson
Major U. S. Army.*

Major John Anderson

UNITED STATES ARMY

FEW years ago I was asked by one of our great newspapers to give it my definition of true patriotism. I wrote to the paper as follows:

"I put the question to a Grand Army comrade of mine, and his answer was: 'To be willing to give all you have, all that you are, and all that you expect to be, for the sake of your country.' This man served with distinguished gallantry as a volunteer officer in the War of the Rebellion, devoted the next thirty years of his life to active duty in the regular army, and upon his retirement settled down in a Massachusetts town, not to rust, like an old fieldpiece, but to become the useful and influential citizen which his service, experience and intelligence fit him to be. I regard him as a true patriot, and am glad to adopt his definition of true patriotism."

The man to whom I referred was Major (then Captain) John Anderson, and it is with genuine pleasure that I respond to the request of the editor of the INDEX for a brief sketch of his life.

He was born in Monson, Massachusetts, sixty-five years ago. If, however, it be true that we live in deeds, not years, he is as old as Methuselah. His boyhood and youth were like that of any other hearty, healthy country boy, full of pranks which need not be recounted here. I think he has always, even as a member of a college faculty, sympathized openly or secretly with good-natured mischief makers. His military record shows that at the age of twenty-two he enlisted as a private in the First Michigan Sharpshooters, January 5, 1863, and served until February 9, 1864. On February 1, 1864, he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the 57th Massachusetts Infantry, one of the most famous of the fighting regiments of the Civil War. In the battle of Petersburg crater, July 30, 1865, he received a severe shell wound, and was discharged for disability, January 1, 1865. On the 25th of March of the same year he became second lieutenant, 20th Veteran Reserve Corps; was breveted first lieutenant and captain, U. S. V., for gallant and meritorious services in the battles before Petersburg, Virginia, and was mustered out of the volunteer service June 30, 1866. On the 10th of August, 1867, he entered the regular army as a second lieutenant in the 25th Infantry; was transferred to the 18th Infantry, April 26, 1869; promoted first lieutenant, October 17, 1878; regimental quartermaster, November 16, 1889; captain, June 21, 1890, and retired with that rank, June 6, 1894. Two years ago he was promoted to the grade of major, under an act of Congress.

Some ten years ago, with an officer of the 57th Massachusetts, I was looking through a collection of photographs of his brother officers of that regiment. On the back of each photograph he had written a word or two epitomizing the character of the original; and on the back of Anderson's picture was the single word "sandy." As patriotism and public spirit characterized him as a citizen, so did what we call sand characterize him as a soldier. During the battle of the Wilderness, when his own regiment, bravely but unwisely standing up before the fire of the enemy, was almost swept away, he seized a gun and joined the regiment nearest at hand, which happened to be my own, the 36th Massachusetts, where he gallantly fought in the ranks. For a short period during the campaign he served as an aide on the staff of the brigade commander, of whose soldierly qualities the major never seemed to be wholly enamoured. In the terrible struggle at the crater at Petersburg on the 30th of July, 1864, he was severely wounded in the arm by a shell, which created the disability for which he was discharged from active service five months later.

In the regular army he saw much service on the plains among the Indians, and was specially honored with the command of a company of mounted Indian scouts. This service was not only dangerous but full of hardship—conditions under which his "sandy" quality was always conspicuous. A brother officer of his in the 18th Infantry once told me how, starting off suddenly in the midst of a blizzard to check an Indian foray, the first sergeant of the company was half sick and very blue, and the men themselves seemed to share his feelings. Anderson, who was really ill and unfit for duty, insisted on starting, and during the march chaffed the first sergeant with such jolly persistency that not only were the blues driven out of him, but the spirit and morale of the entire command restored.

His last service was at Fort Clark, Texas, where he was so seriously affected by the climate that his retirement was imperative; indeed, his condition was so serious that an army surgeon, after a careful examination, informed him that he was incurable. Here, however, the sand showed itself again. The surgeon told him that the record showed no instance of recovery in a case like his. Anderson's reply was: "Every record can be broken and I propose to beat this one;" and he did, as his physical and mental condition fully proves.

His service as a member of the faculty of the Massachusetts Agricultural College is well known. He put into it, as he did into everything he undertook, the best that was in him.

At present he is on recruiting duty with headquarters at New Haven, Connecticut, and sub-stations at Hartford, Bridgeport and Stamford. He is hale, hearty, cheery; always serious of purpose, but with an unfailing sense of humor, and abounding in a dry and sometimes caustic wit. Long may he continue a living type of the patriotic American citizen and the true-hearted "sandy" American soldier.

Class History, 1906

NE short spurt and the race is ours. Yes, dear readers, for three long years we have run a hard race and now the goal line is already in sight. We, the class of 1906, have passed through all the trials, temptations, defeats, sorrows, victories, and exultations of joy. Many of you know our history for the first three years of college life, and you cannot but admit that we have conducted ourselves in a praiseworthy manner.

And now while our history is being written for the last time, we must pause in passing and consider briefly what we really did.

The early days of our Freshman year were made memorable by the work of our invincible football team. In our Sophomore year we entertained the Freshmen, and once again established a record of which we are proud. And then came our Junior year and perhaps of all the years of those which have passed and which are to come, this one was the happiest. Yet it was not all pleasure, for there was a large Freshman class to train in the way they should go, THE INDEX, and the facts, ideas and principles which were fired at us in volleys by "Doc."

The banquet which was tendered to us by the class of 1908 must not be forgotten and to them must be given a share of our good will. What about that trip to the Springfield brewery and the pulp and paper mills at Holyoke and Mount Tom? Surely it is worthy of mentioning as a remarkable incident in our career.

And so we passed our Junior year. Summer and vacation drifted us far apart. With Kennedy in the wilds of Maine throwing the spit-ball to please the natives and Tannatt exploring the Connecticut River by moonlight in a canoe, and others of us in the west, south and east, it looked as though these might be a scattering of such a magnitude that would scarce come together again.

Now the fall has come upon us and we are nearly all back in our places. As we look upon the beautiful hills shrouded in their blue veil and as we see the glorious autumn foliage which decorates the landscape on all sides, a feeling of sadness must come over us to think that perhaps it is the last time that such a sight will be before us.

But alas! the joyous days are gone when we made merry with our German professor and treated physics as a joke. The bell in the chapel has tolled them into the past and each new stroke of the hammer is hurrying us on to the future. The victories which we have helped to win are already a thing of the past and others are closely following in our places, ready to do or try to do as well as we have done.

What of the future? Here is where no man can penetrate for it lies shrouded in the darkness, only to be revealed to us as we journey onward.

Although our class has lost nearly two-thirds of its original members, we, who remain, are courageous, strong, and ready to meet whatever may come.

We cannot treat the last year of our life at Massachusetts as we have done the first three. We as a class need not be ashamed of ourselves. Intellectually and socially we rank well. We have nothing to fear, and let us keep up our good work and fight to the finish.

Then will we become loyal sons of old Massachusetts and that spirit of loyalty will raise ever higher the name of our dear old Alma Mater.

1907 Class History

NCE again are we called upon to glance at our past record. Again we muster at the roll-call and lo, what find we here?

A jolly crowd from old 'o7,
And loyal to the core;
'Tis Naughty Seven then and now,
Naught Seven forevermore.
For many a merry time we've had,
And will have by the score;
Till for life's work our "prep" is done,
And our college course is o'er.

As the somber voice of the clerk peals forth, a revelation gradually dawns upon us. Many are the familiar "heahs" for which we wait in vain. Though few of our former numbers remain to uphold the honor of the best class in college, we note with a thrill of joy the hearty response of the remnant. With the confidence that those who have stayed thus far will be with us to the finish, we feel that the "survival of the fittest" has left to us the refined metal which is sure to stand the test of time.

The first two stages of our progress are past. In the former, "little Willie" sat for his first cute picture and learned his lessons of loyalty. The second reveals our broad grinning amusement at the greenness of 'o8. At last as staid upper classmen we eagerly assume the duties devolving upon us. Whether it be in the encouragement of our new proteges, or the suppression of the exuberant foolishness of 'o8, we have the best interests of the college at heart.

We now abandon the art of war for the quiet pursuits of peace. Nevertheless we still delight to recall some of our early evening escapades. Among the most recent of these as well as the most prominent is a certain red-letter night, the sport of which did not terminate as completely successful as we might have wished. The outcome of this little lark was an eventful trip to Hamp. without even the avowed purpose of "fussing." To our infinite relief "clever Dick" came to the rescue and settled the matter quite amicably for all concerned. Next come those midnight calls both received and paid, on which occasions "Herb" was wont to wear a smile, or "Shimmy" capered 'round with the paddle. Then we see those grand class feasts, those times of jollity when even physics and chemistry were sciences of another world and all our troubles vanished. Who can forget those glorious times when, secure in the confidence of well-laid plans, we gave ourselves up to hearty good cheer.

Our first brush with the Freshmen resulted in a draw. In the rope-pull and football games we trimmed them handily, thus lowering their conceit just three pegs. To leave them a little self confidence, however, we concluded that it was advisable to give them the honors in basketball and baseball,—the first by one point and the second by a margin. We wished to teach politeness without being quite severe.

One or two more instances conclude our list of frolics. Our mourning for the departed Seniors and Babby's prompt dismissal might be mentioned incidentally. But the rub that hurt our sense of duty was, that circumstances compelled us to disappoint the watchman in the chapel on the eve of St. Patrick's day. It seems that one of the faculty was "wise"—there was something doing, so a guard was posted the night before and promptly loaded for bear, or goat, we don't know which.

As this record is merely a statement of the exceptional occurrences, our intellectual abilities and scientific accomplishments which are a matter of course, need not be mentioned. Suffice it to say that we have the material in all branches and will put upon the field of life a finished product of mankind, the like of which has never yet been known.

Sophomore Class History

T is now a year since the class of 1908 first became enrolled on the pages of the INDEX, but what changes have taken place during that interval. Then we were a large number of individuals, today after a year of college life, we are united into a single body, the largest in numbers of any Sophomore class ever in this institution. To attempt a recital of the events of our freshman year is a difficult task but I will try and enumerate some of them.

The very first night of college we met the Sophomores in the campus rush. Although the night was dark and we scarcely knew our own men, we fought bravely and at the end of the rush 1907 gladly withdrew, content at the Senate decision that it was a draw. Soon we began to hear of rope-pull and when one day we were practising up on the hill, the Sophomores tried to steal our rope. There was a great battle and again 1907 retreated, leaving us in possession of the hill and rope. In athletics we lost, after a hard fight, the rope-pull and football, but then our luck changed and the basketball game came our way with a score of 9-8. In baseball we won easily 10-6. The most enjoyable occasion of the year was our class banquet at North Adams and it proved one of the most successful Freshman banquets ever held. We left Amherst so quietly that the Sophomores were unable to learn our destination and the banquet was not disturbed. Pleasant memories of that evening will long remain with us. There was a little disturbance the night after the class baseball game and some of our members received natatorial instruction in the College Pond but we couldn't blame the Sophs for being a little sore after that victory.

Now we have returned to Mass'chusetts for another year. Turning from French and Trig. we must make new conquests in the "physical" world and beat out Billy at his own game. We find a verdantly green class before us to be initiated into the college customs. We have already found an excellent rowing crew among them and learned of their vocal powers. But we assure them that they yet have much to learn before we shall cease our instruction. Our most practical lesson was at the time 1909 wished to learn what the old-fashioned campus rush was like. The second night of college they began to make a disturbance down by the "widow's." Soon 1908 appeared to quell the riot. After a few rushes the obstreperous freshmen all faded into the background and nothing but their discarded headgear was left on the battlefield.

We have so far met the Class of 1909 in but one organized contest—the new pole rush. Here one of our fleet runners captured the pole at the beginning and held it until the end. We won by the overwhelming score of 34-20. We expect this is but a foretaste of coming events and it is these very demands upon our class loyalty which have converted us into a concrete and symmetrical class organization. As we watch the warm summer sunshine on the hills “beyond the river” give place to the snowy bleakness of winter and the rotation of the seasons brings us ever nearer to the goal of our ambitions—Commencement, we shall find our love for old Mass’chusetts and our loyalty for 1908 increasing, without end.

1909 Class History

FROM all parts of New England on the twenty-first day of September, 1905, there assembled in chapel the coming class of 1909, under the scrutinizing eyes of the critical upper classmen.

Those entering on certificate were feeling happy enough, while those who had taken exams. weren't saying a word. They held their breath while the roll of admitted men was read, and as the turn for each one's name drew near his heart stopped beating until it was passed, then only did it resume its action with a more rapid beat, in some cases with joy, in others with sorrow. Better luck to the latter next time. After having the college customs and rules drummed into us we were given a little kind advice on the quiet by the Juniors, and our college days began.

A husky class we are to be sure, and a large one, a very promising class that much may be expected of in the next four years. Our college spirit was exhibited by at least a dozen men reporting for football practice with the varsity squad the very first day, a number of them making good. We were told that to pay our taxes at once was good college spirit, so we cashed in regardless of other demands.

On this first night of our college days many of us went down town to see Amherst by lamplight. The willing Sophs proved ready guides, teaching us how to treat the Freshmen of next year. We are quite sure we know now.

The Sophs were the victors of the "flag-rush," but not until after five full minutes of the hardest kind of tussle with our spirited class. We hope to redeem ourselves, however, in both the rope-pull and on the gridiron, our prospects for victory in the latter being especially brilliant.

We are a class that may be relied upon to furnish plenty of good material for future athletic teams, and other branches as well.

Our history now is not long but it will be some day. May it be a credit to the class, the class of '09.

Football

DURING the last few years we have invariably stuck to the Dartmouth men to coach our football teams, and to these men and our indomitable spirit is due the success that we have had. I cannot praise too highly the spirit of old Mass'chusetts, for it is the spirit that has brought us to the front; it is the spirit that has caused our athletic teams to rank with colleges far beyond us in numbers. Without this spirit we could do but little, inasmuch as we have so few men from which to choose.

Last season, 1904, we prided ourselves in having one of the best teams that we have ever had. There were just eleven men and practically no substitutes, to play every game. But under the careful coaching of Mr. Bullock, we won all our games but two. Since most of the members of that team were graduated last June, it left a very hard problem to be solved.

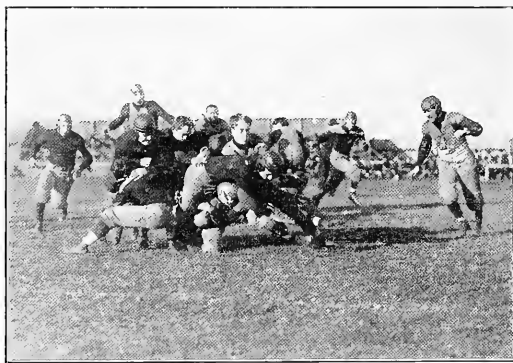

Last spring, we began work at once looking for material. We had spring practice for ten days to find the best material we had. Several men showed up fairly well, but none excellently. Consequently it became evident that our task to develop a team out of so much raw material was no small undertaking. However we have started out with Mr. Thomas Keady as coach. He comes to us well recommended from Dartmouth. We know that he is working hard to turn out a good team, and too much praise cannot be given him for his untiring energy along this line.

Our first game of the season opened with Holy Cross as usual. It was a decisive victory for the latter, winning by a score of 17-0. This score does not tell anything of the hard fight and plucky stand that we made against the strong veteran line of Holy Cross. We were especially weak on our ends, and there is where Holy Cross made most of their gains. Our next game came with Dartmouth. By this time our line had been whipped into shape and the game we put up against Dartmouth won the admiration of their coaches. Although the final score was 18-0, we practically held them down to 12 points which were scored in the first half. During the second half, Dartmouth could not gain through our line and the final score was made on a fluke. Our third game with Brown, coming so close after the Dartmouth trip, found us altogether unprepared for Brown's style of play, they using mostly trick plays and end runs. We were unable to hold them down to a smaller score than 24-0.

Although we have been beaten in our first three games, we are not at all discouraged, because we know that we have not been idle. If there is any criticism to be made, I would criticise arranging such a hard schedule at the beginning of the season, before we are prepared for it. We must prepare for each game if we wish to make a showing.

EARLY last spring quite a number of men responded to the call for baseball candidates, and began practice in the drill hall. Of the number who began practice there were however only five experienced men—the greater part being Freshmen. As soon as the weather permitted, the squad took up practice on the campus and the real work of the season was begun under the supervision of Coach Bowler. The limbering-up and practice work gave indications of a very successful season, but as the season wore on, it became apparent that there was a lack of experience, which was of course due to the green material. In spite of this fact, however, the team made a very creditable showing by winning half of the games scheduled, a feat which has not been performed for many years in our baseball history. All the more credit is due the team when it is taken into consideration that nearly all the eastern colleges, with the exception of Harvard and Yale, were included in the schedule. Having just finished so brilliant a season, and having lost only two men of last year's team and with the vast amount of good baseball material in the present Freshman class, there is no reason why we should not put just as good a team on the field next year. All that is needed is the co-operation of each and every man in college. Encourage the men on the teams, rather than dishearten them, for good results cannot be obtained unless we all work together for the same end. Practically the same schedule will be adopted for the coming season so that we have a chance to retrieve some of our lost laurels.

IN looking back over the past season, one can hardly say that it was a very successful one, and I do not think it was due wholly to the work of the team. When the call for candidates was made last year a large number reported, but they soon dwindled down to about seven men. Now what we want is a good squad out for the whole season, or at least enough for a scrub game every night. This is a fine chance for the Sophomores and Freshmen to get in practice for their annual contest and they should take advantage of it. It would help the captain and manager greatly in picking out good men, if we could have regular scheduled class games before Christmas. There are generally some good men to be found in the class teams, that don't try for the varsity. The outlook for the coming season is encouraging. By the graduation of 1905 we lose two good men, but with the material now in college we should turn out a fast team. This year we want a team that will make a record which approaches those made by the football teams of 1901 and 1904. The manager is arranging a fine schedule and there are some hard games to be played. If we are to have a successful season we must also have the hearty co-operation of the whole student body.

Review of the Year

When one sits down to review the happenings of the past college year, he is overwhelmed with a flood of recollections. He recalls one by one each little event which has gone to make up the total, and shape the destinies of our grand old college for another year. To attempt to sift from all these incidents those which will exert a real influence on the succeeding history of the college is indeed a hard task.

The past year has been quite eventful as far as the college has been concerned. The year opened auspiciously with the largest freshman class on record. Professor Babson returned fresh from the Continent to take up new duties as German instructor in addition to his connection with the English department. Our football team established an enviable record on the gridiron.

Thus the clear skies and bracing air of autumn gave place to the snow and ice of winter and soon the Christmas recess was at hand. Returning after Christmas, we were shocked to learn of the death of our classmate William S. Chapman. In the gloom and depression of the winter that followed there occurred two unhappy events: the trouble between the Senior Class and the Faculty, and the death of President Goodell.

With the advent of spring, however, our prospects brightened. As the distant hills became fresh and green with the spring sunshine, the dissensions in college disappeared. The bill appropriating the money for the Horticultural building and various other improvements passed the Legislature and was approved by the Governor. The baseball team, although handicapped by unfortunate circumstances met with remarkable success and when '05 appeared on the Commencement stage, all was joy and peace.

Of course there was another aspect of life during the past year. The campus rush resulted in the usual unsatisfactory manner owing to the lack of a trophy to decide it positively. The class contests developed much class spirit, especially the last one which indirectly led several people to bathe at an unseemly hour in the college pond and disturbed the mental equilibrium of several residents of Pleasant street. The customary St. Patrick's Day celebration was omitted this year, to the bitter disappointment, 'tis said, of a lonely watchman in the chapel. That was indeed "Hard Luck." There were the usual tilts in the class room, ludicrous, pathetic and tragic, but these belong elsewhere. Nor must we forget the celebrations after the Williams game and the passage of the college appropriation bill through the Legislature.

This, in brief, outlines the events of the year. In every case the college has pushed onward and upward. The most trying and vexatious incidents have been satisfactorily settled. When the college opened, there were nearly two hundred enrolled. At Commencement there were but a scant one hundred fifty left. The rest had fallen by the wayside. Many men come to college insufficiently prepared or lacking the necessary application and these are sure to fail at this institution where no mercy is shown to delinquents. But such is the expected order of things: it is the survival of the fittest. For verily I say unto you that "Many are called, but few are chosen."

Henry Hill Goodell

DURING the hours which followed that sad April morning, still fresh in the memory of so many, when the death of President Goodell was announced, the feelings of the undergraduates of the college found expression in fitting words. Among them were these: "Surely he, who has made himself dear to us by his conscientiousness and earnest desires for our welfare

* * * "Earnest desires for our welfare,"—here we find the students' estimate of President Goodell's attitude toward them; "conscientiousness,"—this reveals their appreciation of a characteristic that belonged to him. Taken together, these expressions are an eloquent tribute from young hearts to the memory of their teacher, counsellor and friend.

The Massachusetts Agricultural College is properly classed among the small colleges, and illustrates the advantages that the small college offers. Prominent among these is of course the better opportunity here given the teacher to know his students and to adapt instruction to individual needs, and to secure these results some of our large colleges are increasing the number of their instructors. The opportunity for personal contact and influence President Goodell heartily enjoyed. While he rarely failed to bring inspiration to the class as a whole, his interest sought out the individual mind upon which he played with a touch so sure and masterful that harmonies were evoked which were a surprise even to the student himself. President Goodell appreciated possibilities, and had a word of encouragement for the most unpromising. With what delight, too, he announced to the students any fresh evidence of the fostering care of the Legislature, and how earnestly he worked for the success of any "appropriation" that would make the college more helpful to the student body! From this desire to help the student in his work arose the President's intense interest in the growth and efficiency of the library. His own words show his appreciation of it: "Books are the tools of both teacher and pupil. A library is perhaps the most important adjunct of instruction. It is open to all and is used by all * * * In every department of science throughout the world the keenest intellects are at work, seeking for solutions to the unending series of problems that present themselves in the physical and natural world. 'Light, more light,' said the dying philosopher, and the longing of the world is but the echo of his last faint cry. To do our duty and to give reply to the many demands made upon us requires all the light and all the experience of other minds, wheresoever they may be found."

But President Goodell's interest was not confined to the intellectual life of his students. In the earlier years especially, and before his duties as President claimed so much of his time and thought, he was the companion of the students. He shared their sports, he helped them in their difficulties,—to all he was a friend, to many he was like a brother. His cheerful good humor, his affable manners, his warm sympathies, helped him and them, and we are not surprised that one of his students should write, "Living amongst the students in one of the college dormitories he came closer to the college lives of the boys than any other professor, and his influence during his long years of service was wholly for the truth and the uplifting of character." More than one alumnus of the Massachusetts Agricultural College recalls today the kind word, the gentle reminder, the wise counsel, that were potent influences in determining the current of his life, and joins the undergraduates in blessing the memory of him "who has made himself dear to us by his earnest wishes for our welfare."

Conscientious devotion to his work was a characteristic of President Goodell as a man; it was especially marked after he became President.

He was naturally self-distrustful. He knew well the prejudices that beset the path of the college, the limitations with which it was obliged to contend. Whatever motto his ambition had chosen, it certainly was not "Aut Cæsar, aut nullus." But he had been with the college from its beginning, and had become deeply interested in its success. He had enjoyed acquaintance with the author of the Land Grant Act, had caught his spirit and sympathized with his liberal view of the field which the colleges of his creation were designed to cover, and when the call to this responsible and difficult task was distinctly heard the President answered. That the acceptance of this call involved a possible sacrifice cannot be doubted. He had a fine appreciation of literature; he was a ready writer, an interesting and forceful speaker; the fair field of scientific investigation offered him its choice flowers and rich fruits; surely the path to distinction, to eminent success, was open to him. But from these he turned aside and laying himself upon the altar of devotion to the college he gave himself to her exhausting work. During these toilsome years more than one "15th of June, 1863" has come to him with its forlorn hope in his struggle against his own physical weariness and pain and against the inexperience and moral obliquity of others; but he quailed not and he died with his armor on, a true witness to his faith in the education of the laboring classes, in the dignity of labor and in the worth of the individual soul.

Many friends of the Agricultural College will recall with interest the addresses delivered at the college on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the passage of the Morrill Land Grant Act. One of the speakers on that occasion constructed an imaginary picture gallery, the walls of which "will be decked with the painted images of those who have been the creators or benefactors of this institution." The speaker named several of these, and closed his address with these words: "And when in after time the long list of the faithful and devoted servants of the college shall be scanned, one will be found who from 1867 was professor of modern languages and English Literature; from 1867 to 1869, instructor in gymnastics and military science; in 1869, lecturer in entomology; in 1869 and 1870, instructor in zoölogy; from 1869 to 1871, instructor in anatomy and physiology; in 1872 and 1873, instructor in history; in 1885 and 1886, librarian; and finally in 1886, president of the college; and Goodell's name 'will lead all the rest'."

Whether this prediction is to be fulfilled is not for us to say. Of this, however, we may be sure that the increase in the number of students during these last nineteen years; the additions to buildings and equipment; the repeated appropriations for the maintenance of the college made by the State of Massachusetts and the United States; the growth, among the people of Massachusetts, of confidence in the college already ripening into affectionate loyalty; these will bear, to future generations, abiding testimony to the conscientious work and untiring devotion of President Henry H. Goodell.

Fifty-Seventh Book of Chronicles

And it came to pass that during the interregnum after the death of Henry the Father, that William the Round Tile held the sceptre.

Now when the year was nearly spent and the pea-green Freshmen being in need of chastisement for various deeds unbecoming their station an ancient custom was revived, namely ducking in the college pond.

And one night a great multitude formed and marched to an abode kept by a certain widow and her daughter.

And they held counsel together, and after much argument and deliberation it was agreed that for the betterment of mankind it was advisable to cleanse these foul bodies of their iniquity by immersing them in said college pond.

Whereupon with one accord they made their way to the door of the abode, and in a voice like thunder demanded the persons of the culprits from the publicans and sinners who resided there.

But the hostess fearing for the safety of her guests more than the wrath of the multitude, came forth and delivered a tirade of many and violent words, saying:

"Ye men, ye worse than men, ye brutes, take yourselves hence. Back to your hoes and kine; depart, leave these poor defenceless women to the quiet that is want to prevail in this metropolis."

And many were they that were ready to do as she had bidden them, being sore afraid.

But Jack of the heavy paw stood afar off, and when the woman had gone within, said: "Men of Honor, take no heed of this woman; gird yourselves, for the bark is worse than the bite—the appointed time is at hand."

Whereupon the multitude fell upon the doors and windows, and in a trice the publicans and sinners were brought out.

Then the multitude marched slowly, for it was very dark, to the celebrated baths of Mass'chusetts.

And while they were gone there was wailing and gnashing of teeth at the abode of the widow.

Between the sobs and lamentations came a lull, in which the daughter, a great and mighty thinker, sprang up, saying, "Herein I see a chance to rival 'Lawson' as to 'Frightful Frankness.'"

Whereupon she disclosed a plan, shrewd and clever as woman alone can devise. "On the morrow will I appear before the king and demand an indemnity of this riotous band for disturbing the nerves of four defenceless women."

And it was agreed that there was one long head in the family, and visions of automobiles and European travels came before them.

Thereupon, when the sun was well up and William had ascended the throne, there appeared before him a worthy follower of Madame Yale, who with a voice quivering with wrath borne of her long vigil, told how the multitude had invaded the home of a widow and her daughter.

And William, when he had heard her sad story, said, "Fear not, woman, the offenders shall be dealt with according to their sin."

Whereupon he retired to his Holy of Holies and held a council with his round tiles, his sheep and his fertilizers.

Finally, after much reasoning, it was decided that of all the tribes of Israel, the second should bear the penalty of the crime.

Then he decreed that the tribe should appear before the High Court of the land to listen to the council of older and wiser heads.

Wherefore a multitude of Israelites appeared the following day in the chamber of the High Justice.

And when finally they were admitted to the presence of the all-high judge, they were chided at length for their iniquity.

And it was decreed that they should pay into the royal coffers one hundred and fifty shekels of silver.

Now when this became known there was much sorrow amongst them, for the second tribe parted not with its shekels cheerfully.

And they reasoned with the king saying, "We can not do this thing."

Whereupon the Judge answered, saying, "Either pay these silver shekels or suffer exile in distant parts."

And the tribe departed with extreme sorrow in their hearts.

Now it came to pass on the morrow that a young man of the tribe, a young lawyer of great talent, arose and departed and came again unto the Judge.

And when he was come to the Judge, he reasoned with him saying, "Why dost thou purpose to tax us in this manner?"

And the Judge answered not.

But the young lawyer spake once more, reasoning with him, and finally persuaded him that such was extortion, and to rid himself of his youthful opponent, the Judge closed the deal for twenty-five.

Song of Pennies

Sing a song of pennies
A pocketful, ah me
Have you any coppers?
Said our manager Milford C.

So with a few more ringers
To the steps of North they went,
And all during English
They pitched away their cents.

Oh how those coins did rattle
And ring against the brick,
Ah me but this is easy
I'll show them a little trick.

But when the game was over
Poor Milford he looked sad
For he was minus twenty,
Twenty pennies to the bad.

Faculty Philosophy

There is pleasure in looking into the eyes of those to whom we have given conditions.

Look wise, but never volunteer information.

To try to bluff through mathematics is like carrying a lantern before a blind man.

Learn to say, "I do not know," not "I think."

There is no greater fool than he who thinks himself through a course; no one wiser than he who would not bet a cent either way.

We do as we please, but the student body must obey the college rules.

A bluff is like a lame horse—it will break down if ridden too long.

Believe what we tell you. It is policy if you expect to receive a degree from this institution.

Jolts

(Scene—A mid-week prayer meeting at the First Church.)

THE MINISTER: "Will you lead us in prayer, Brother Waugh?"

PROFESSOR WAUGH (who often indulges in poker at the —— club): "It's not my bid I dealt." (Great commotion.)

Professor Wellington -- (talking to Tottingham in Amherst Square.)

TOTTINGHAM: "Are you coming my way, Professor?"

PROFESSOR W.: "A—a—a next week."

(Scene—Senior English.)

PROFESSOR MILLS: "You should never begin a sentence with the adverb 'well.'"

STUDENT: "If I am not mistaken, you do it frequently."

PROFESSOR M.: "Well, what if I do?"

PROFESSOR BABSON (reciting from Whittier): "Who touches a hair of you gray dog, etc." (Checkers on the brain.)

Appropriate and Otherwise

On the wings of borrowed wit."
- HIGGINS: "Hold the fort! I am coming!"
- KING: "I never knew so young a body with so old a head."
- LARNED: "Pernicious Weed! Why didst thou cross the path
Of our great Sampson in the art of math?"
- LINCOLN: "My life is one demd horrid grind."
- MISS LIVERS: "A poor lone woman."
"She is pretty to walk with,
And witty to talk with,
And pleasant, too, to think on."
- PARKER: "His cogitative faculties were immersed
In a cogitabundity of cogitation."

- PETERS: "To one of more intrinsic worth,
This fair land will ne'er give berth."
- PHILBRICK: "As good be out of the world as out of fashion."
- PIERCE: "He is a man, take him all in all
I shall not look upon his like again."

Why ar'n't they all contented like me?"
- SUMMERS: "The man behind the gun."
- THOMPSON: "Throw Physics to the dogs, I'll none of it!"
- WALKER: "He meets thee like a pleasant thought,
When such are wanted."
- WATKINS: "Hang sorrow—care will kill a cat—
And therefore let's be merry."
- WATTS: "I awoke one morning and found myself famous."
- WOOD: "It requires a surgical operation to get a joke into his understanding."
- INDEX BOARD: "We have met the enemy and they are ours."

Jokettes

KID (as someone lights a match): "You must remember that sometimes matches go out." (No one laughs.)

MAJOR JOHN (seeing very few in his class): "This class doesn't seem very full today, but I suppose they will be full after the banquet tonight."

PROFESSOR LULL (in Anatomy class, to Gowdy, '08): "Now, Mr. Gowdy, I move this chair with my hand. What organ do I bring into use?"

GOWDY: "Hand organ."

KING (to the Kid): "I have hunted through my dry set and find Calcium Hydroxide but I need Calcium Oxide."

THE KID: "Hum—can you tell me the difference between a live rat and a drowned one?"

KING: "No, sir, I can not."

THE KID: "One contains water and the other does not."

ARCHIE HARTFORD: "When I am sick, my food always goes to my stomach."

KID'S ADVICE TO CUTTER: "Come back with your sleeves rolled up."

CAREY (drilling B Company): "Parade rest, attention, order arms!"

BILLY H.: "Gentlemen, some of you will try and cut when the angel Gabriel calls his roll."

MAJOR ANDERSON (in tactics): "What are some of the methods of getting out of the army?"

BRIGHT SENIOR: "By getting shot, half shot, and fired."

STUDENT (to Professor Howard, whom he sees on the way to the Chem. Lab. carrying a baseball bat): "Good morning, Professor; you look as if you were out to make a hit."

PROFESSOR HOWARD: "Yes, the Sophs (1907) are coming into the laboratory today for the first time, and I may have to use it."

PROFESSOR HASBROUCK (to '07): "I suppose you all know where the reservoir is?"

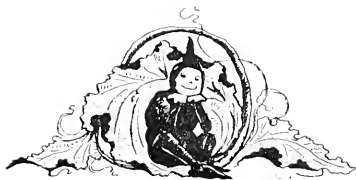

(All laugh.)

PROF. H.: "I don't see the point—oh, yes I do!"

PRAY (sees a form on the opposite side of his laboratory stand): "Say, boy, hand me that acid."

DOCTOR WELLINGTON: "What can I do for you now, Mr. Pray?"

"KID" HOWARD—"Full well they laughed with counterfeited glee
At all his jokes, for many a joke had he."

The Freshman's Dream

The applause of staring grandstands to command,

The risks of pain and danger to despise,

To rush the pigskin up the sodden field

And hear the cries of triumph and surprise;

To be a hero with the bleacher fans,

To bat and field the ball with dextrous wing,

To be the man to knock the winning run

And homeward slide while crowded grandstands ring;

To be a shark in all his lessons dear,

To be the sportiest man within his class,

And often to the town of "Hamp" to go

And rush and fuss with heedless, reckless dash.

Class Song

The class of naughty-seven behold,
The class of noble spirit bold.
With dash and might we always fight,
Our games we always win.
The class stands solid, always true,
Her teams are fast, her losses few.
 Cheer, cheer, old naughty-seven,
 Her worth is here revealed;
 Onward to victory with mighteous zeal!

In after years when we are far
From our old Alma Mater,
Our thoughts will to the campus steal
And those familiar scenes reveal.
Our college days will ring with cheers
For naughty-seven, whom we hold dear.
 Cheer, cheer, old naughty-seven,
 Her worth is here revealed;
 Onward to victory with mighteous zeal!

Tips from the Index Board

1. Any and all persons having complaints to register against the 1907 INDEX may call on the editor the day the INDEX comes out. We have just received a new supply of baseball bats, and complainants must present themselves singly.
2. Kindly remember that we have roasted different people in proportion to the thickness of their skin, and we hope no blisters arise.
3. There are people who have troubles worse than yours—there may be some comfort in that.
4. The Editor leaves for a three-months' vacation the day before the INDEX appears. There is safety in flight.
5. Go to T. Canavan for sympathy. He can tell you all you wish to know.
6. Assist the Manager by paying cash.

Observations by the College Clock

PERHAPS you do not all of you know—you thoughtless young fellows who pass beneath me day by day as I mark the hour for recitation, for dinner and for Chapel, up here above the belfry—that I have a real live heart beneath my gray exterior. Perhaps you do not realize that a clock has its joys and its griefs, its pleasures and its troubles like you. You may not have thought how cold it is up here in the winter, in the time of the blizzard and the zero weather. So cold has it become at times that my hands have been frozen stiff, and for days I have been unable to move them. You did not think of this doubtless, when a bunch of you were out plugging snowballs at my face, though you rarely succeeded in reaching me. It only goes to show the prevalent lack of respect and veneration among the present generation for age and eminence. But on the whole I have very little to complain of in the life I lead, and very often I have an opportunity to see sights which are very interesting and amusing.

Of all the classes that have ever passed beneath me and out into the world, one to which we should all be thankful, is the class of '92—the class which was sufficiently thoughtful and generous to place me in the tower that all far and near might know the time of day. Many were the happy spectacles which I was privileged to look upon in those good old days. Good to see was the class and college spirit displayed in many ways, but I can say from experience that this college spirit has not deteriorated, but is growing fuller and deeper every year.

After the long, quiet and rather lonesome summer months, there is nothing which rejoices my heart more than to see you lads returning, many all tanned and browned from hard work, vigorous from fresh air and exercise, back at college for another year to renew those friendships which make the life at this college what it is; back to study, to work, and to play. Cheering to my heart are the shouts on the campus in the autumn—twenty-five—forty-nine—thirty-seven—three—and the sound of running and pushing and struggling as the scrub gives way before the heavier varsity football squad. What a joyful sound peals out upon the startled air when the young, green Freshmen pull at the bellrope with all their might, urged on by the shouts of the Sophomores, stirring up every soul within several miles to let them know that Mass'chusetts has won an important football game—a game, perhaps, with a college several times as large and wealthy as herself, but not possessing that sturdy patriotism and college spirit—the feeling that they must win for the glory of the college—that characterizes Mass'chusetts players. May they ever continue with the same or increased zeal and love for their Alma Mater in the glorious years to come, when they will no longer have to fight so hard to get the necessary funds to bring out the winning team!

In the early morning up here in the tower I see young men coming in all directions toward the chapel—some early and others straggling along at the last moment. But what come they here to do? This was a hard question to answer in days gone by, when a venerable aged man led the morning exercises, for no one seemed to take any interest in the proceedings, but all to come under compulsion. But these things are all passed away now, and we see the aged gentleman no more. He seems to have severed all connection with the college now, taking so little interest in us as to stop his subscription to the college paper. But he is aged, and age calls for respect.

One morning not many months ago the chapel bell began to peal forth note after note in a very startling manner. As it was a very unusual hour for it to be heard from, everyone was surprised. This it kept up for five minutes steadily, when it became quiet. If the particulars are required, it might be well to refer to a certain man by the name of Bill—the man who told Joker to put that tooth back into his head and “get into it” at the Dartmouth football game—and inquire why it was that he arrived breathless and hastily dressed, with wild eyes, at a few minutes past the hour of seven!

On any bright Sunday morning at about 10.20, a tramp-tramping is heard on the walks and I see quite a number of groups of fellows, dressed in their Sunday best, all wending their way to the churches of the center. Why it is that these men do not organize with the faculty and institute services in the chapel is a question, but anyway, it is no great hardship to walk a mile to church on a bright Sunday morning. In the evening more young men are seen on their way to town, and then it is that they sometimes have fair companions from Draper Hall by their sides. I see them strolling down the walks very slowly, as if every moment of their walk were precious. All in all, Sunday at Mass'chusetts is a noteworthy day.

The one thought at which my heart becomes sad and tears come to my eyes is the death of our beloved president. We old-timers realize much better what Henry Hill Goodell did for the college than you younger men who knew him only when his powers were failing and he was hardly able to carry on his duties day by day. That Mass'chusetts had a great man to mourn is seen by the large number of distinguished gentlemen who came from all parts to pay tribute to his memory on the day of his funeral.

Among those things which tend to inspire the men to a greater love of college, I can not forbear speaking of the mass meetings held in the chapel on evenings before great football games. How overflowing with feeling are the addresses and the songs and cheers which are heard, and how eloquent they are of Mass'chusetts's spirit! May they continue to be a source of inspiration to players and men in the years to come.

At the first of every month there are generally some very interesting scenes below me of which I hear much and can imagine more. It is at this time that the faculty meetings occur, and the weighty matters about college are decided. The deliberate, careful, deep-voiced Professor Brooks who presides is vacillating about some important matter which demands immediate attention. The twins, Billy and Johnny, are discussing tans and cotans. Hot-headed Babby, who is bothered "like thunder," has a great deal to say about discipline and like matters, while Ach Louis is trying to decide why it is that he is unpopular with his classes. The Kid has a care-worn expression of countenance.

As to the future of this college, everything from this height—above all petty weaknesses and failings—seems encouraging. Classes are increasing in size and quality, a better education than ever before is being offered, and what is more important, people are beginning to realize as they have not in the past, the real worth of the college. She is becoming a power in the state. Certainly a bright future is now about to dawn upon the Massachusetts Agricultural College.

We hail thee, class of brain and might
That decks its festal board tonight,
For wily Sophs has not been able
To bar the way to banquet table.

Our right to rule was early shown,
Our deeds of prowess well are known.
The host of Sophs was pulled by rope
Until it lost its little hope.

Then once again these boys were tried
Without a rope, in football pride.
Our picture, too, was finely caught,
Unless all signs now count for naught.

The next year's Freshmen soon shall get
A suit that will not spoil from wet.
Then learn to be polite, not bold —
Pond's extract never cured a cold.

Now hail our colors, green and white,
An emblem of our honor bright;
As fair a flag as ere was seen
Is nineteen-seven in white and green.

In future years to come and go
May we know all there is to know;
May our fame rise up from earth to heaven.
Three rousing cheers for old Naught-Seven!

HAROLD EDWARD ALLEY wandered into Lynn one bright morning about the second of November, 1880, from no one knows where. Like many other Methodist ministers' sons, Harold never liked to be in one place long, and consequently he has lived in fourteen different places. Naturally from the manner of his life his education was somewhat desultory, but after spending a few weeks or months at various high schools and academies, and dabbling in a vast number of subjects, from Greek to fussing, he considered himself ready for college. He entered Syracuse University in 1902, but soon left, deciding that Mass'chusetts was the place for him. Although the roving spirit has at times been strong upon him (especially while he was taking Physics), he always has turned his back upon temptation and trudged manfully along, trusting some day to be the proud possessor of his hard-earned B.Sc. Alley has for some time served as a private secretary for Tabby, and is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity.

ARTHUR HUGUENIN ARMSTRONG. This "moa' less 'longated" specimen was discovered on the 24th of September, 1883, in the town of Wolfville, Nova Scotia. To what genus he belongs is not known, but he resembles some of those sclerenchymatous prosenchyma which "old Protoplasm" used to show us up on the hill. If we were to compare him with one of Mr. Blake's nursery trees, we would say that he is headed rather high. That he is long as to his legs is evident to everyone. Arthur soon had enough of the wildness of Wolfville, and chose a more propitious location in Massachusetts. He received his education largely at Hyde Park, where he graduated from the high school in 1903. Since coming to Mass'chusetts he has led rather of a strenuous life, being a great plugger. His hobby is bugs, in the researches of which he has become famous, though very few besides himself are acquainted with the fact. He is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity.

EARLE GOODMAN BARTLETT. It has been said that Chicago is way out in the "wild and woolly West," but the fact that this gentleman comes from that distant city amply disproves the statement. Earle first appeared there January 18, 1884, on one of those winter morns when a freezing wind was blowing off Lake Michigan. Like many others, his youth was uneventful until after he graduated from the Englewood High School. On a visit East he learned of Mass'chusetts, and returned to Illinois determined to seek our college for a higher education. Since joining 1907 Earle has pushed rapidly to the front. Without him, Kid and his renowned choir would meet with an ignominious downfall in their attempt to render a "concord of sweet harmony," for he is the organist. He also scribbles for the College Signal, and has roasted many of his classmates by means of his position on the INDEX Board, so that he is now being roasted himself. Bartlett is secretary of the College Senate, is class historian, and has won his numerals and "M" playing baseball. He has attracted some admiration since he courageously elected Math. We judge that he left his heart behind him on the prairies of Illinois, for we recently heard him directing the shipment of a floral order to Chicago, which shows that he is but mortal. The Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity claims him as a member.

JOHN THOMAS CARUTHERS hails from Columbia,—that's way down south in Tennessee. He was born March 22, 1879. His home was in the hilly country where the phosphate grows and the little goats skip about over the bones of their ancient predecessors. He tells us that when he was not occupied in driving these refractory beasts, he was attending the public schools of Columbia. Later he graduated from the normal academic course at Nashville University. As Massachusetts best suited his ideas of what a college should be, he joined the class of 1907 and has never since regretted his choice. He has been a strong man for his class, having filled with dignity the position of sergeant-at-arms, and having been ropepull captain for two years. As a result Naughty-seven holds two trophies, well won. Major John honored him with a corporalsy, and he is a man always to be counted on in times of need.

WAYLAND FAIRBANKS CHACE. The next victim of the chronicler's pen is one by the name of Chace. He was born on the 13th of August, 1884, at Middleboro, Mass. A profound reverence for domestic felicity caused him to request, on the first day of his sojourn here, that he be allowed to remain at home. And many are the enchanting visions which still occasionally haunt him of "Home, Sweet Home." Being desirous of seeing a little of the great big world, however, he has managed to break the home ties long enough to visit Boston, New York, Toronto, Montreal and Portland, and become somewhat acquainted with life on the sea in a yacht. He is charged with being quite a fusser; in answer to which he cites his extreme bashfulness in the presence of ladies. His personal attractiveness and jovial manner would appear somewhat puzzling under the circumstances. The course here is evidently better than medicine for him, as he has improved greatly so far and we have high hopes for him in the future. A member of C. S. C.

CLIFTON HARLAND CHADWICK. Many famous personages have been born in South Acton, according to Chad, and without a doubt there is some truth in the fact, as our chief, Clifton Harland Chadwick, was born in that historic hamlet October 26, 1883. That town was not progressive enough for Chad, and after testing its qualities for ten years he moved to a place which we think must have been named in his honor—Cliftdale.

While here he attended the Saugus High School and graduated with the class of 1902. Being precocious he rested a year before attempting college, and without a doubt he benefited by the change, for since entering with 1907 he has developed some habits which our younger members seem to lack. There is no need to mention these habits here as we all agree that they are all honorable and we can not help but feel a little envious. Chad has a strong pull with the Math. department, and foretells the weather. He is a member of the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity.

JOSEPH OTIS CHAPMAN, commonly known as "Chappie," dedicated for his birthplace the town of Brewster, 'way down on the cape; population, eight hundred souls; chief industry, fishing. Perhaps the idea which actuated him to choose a birthplace of this description was the same as that of Julius Caesar—it is better to be first in a village town than second at Rome. Like many other famous men the exact date of his birth is still doubtful, but it is believed by the best authorities to have been February 3, 1884. Chappie soon made known his determination to seek a college education, and so we find him here, a member of the illustrious class of 1907. Not exactly the same man as we see today, however. Chappie has changed a great deal since that time, and we hope it has not been entirely for the worse. An example of his changing disposition may be seen in the sale of a certain commodity in which a number of other college men have engaged. It is doubtful if he himself can tell the whole account of his changes—certainly no one else can. Joe has not been lacking in his athletic interest, having won his numerals in basketball and tried his hand at various other sports. He is now interested in landscape gardening, and is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity.

MILFORD H. CLARK, Jr., was evolved in the neighboring town of Sunderland, October 4, 1883. There among the onions and tobacco Milford grew up. He had a distrust for the educational facilities of the place of his nativity and so he went up to Mount Hermon where he prepared for Amherst College. He entered there in September, 1903, but soon left to enter our own institution. Mil is rather a little fellow, but like Shimmie and the rest of 'em he is "right there with the goods." He has always been a desultory fusser and has had acquaintance with certain maidens down at the "Conservatory" in Boston and across the river at Smith, but not until recently could we designate him as a real "co-ed chaser." His appearance at the first informal with a stately young woman from Draper Hall has placed him in that category. Mil is a prominent man in class and college. He was manager of our Freshman and captain of our Sophomore baseball teams, has won his "M" on the varsity football and baseball, is assistant manager of the football team and is business manager of the INDEX. He won the college tennis championship last June and makes believe play a snare drum in the band. He is a member of the College Shakespearean club.

FREDERICK AUGUSTUS CUTTER. Come one, come all; here under the big tent you will find Frederick Augustus Cutter, the original funny man. He can tell you more about Pittsburg, Indianapolis and the West than any hot-air merchant in this vicinity. Frederick, or "Joke," as he is known around college, is without doubt the only product of Pelham, N. H., at M. A. C. We are all thankful of this because with another similar specimen the college would turn into a circus with Joke standing in the main ring snapping the whip. Fred was born in Pelham, N. H., sometime in 1882. After a course of preparation at Lowell High School, Joke entered M. A. C., but after bucking the semester exams for no gain regretted the step and dropped into our class. Since entering college, athletics have been materially benefited by Joke's presence. He has played guard or center on the varsity three years, and helped the 1907 basketball and baseball teams also. This spring Joke is to manage the varsity baseball team, and we can safely predict a successful season. He is a member of Phi Sigma Kappa.

WALTER EBENEZER DICKINSON. There are very few towns that are able to produce more than one famous man. North Amherst, however, is an exception. The latest in her line of prodigies is Walter Ebenezer Dickinson. This boy orator was born on September 25, 1885. His early existence was spent knocking around the streets of the "big city." In due time he entered and graduated from the Amherst High School. As "Dick" was chemically inclined he came to Massachusetts. We see little of this youth around the campus, but his influence is strongly felt throughout the class. He pulled on the Freshman and Sophomore rope pull teams and is the artist of this book. Where he received his inspirations for his artistic abilities we know not, but it is intimated that one fair damsel and a few old cronies from the post office step posed for him. Dick is a member of Phi Sigma Kappa.

JASPER FAY EASTMAN was originated in Townsend, March 17, 1887, at eight o'clock sharp. From all accounts Jasper seems to have led a very uneventful youth, passing in regular order through the years of the grammar and high schools.

It was said that he was salutatorian of his class at graduation—he might have been valedictorian but for the fact that there was another member in the class. At any rate, he passed Billy's examinations, and after long preparation, on the morning of the fifteenth of September, 1903, set out from Townsend for Mass'chusetts with the best wishes of his friends and a large supply of canned goods. Since that eventful morning Jasper has not been idle, and has lost no opportunity that has come to him. He often makes trips over to Mount Holyoke—so often as to cause alarm to some of his friends,—but he is nevertheless a good student. His hobby is agriculture, and he bids fair to turn out a veritable "wheat."

ARCHIE AUGUSTUS HARTFORD. When this fair youth first cast the trajectory of his mortal life at Westford, Massachusetts, the calendar indicated January 10, 1889. At that remote period Westford was a beautiful town of one thousand inhabitants, therefore Archie became the thousand and oneth. History is silent concerning his childhood, but it is known that he graduated from the Westford High School. It was at that time that he decided to join the class of 1906 at Mass'chusetts, but soon seeing his mistake united his fortunes with those of Naughty-seven. Since that time he has proved his worth to the class, doing valiant service in right field at baseball. Among the honors which he has received we will mention only that of being former reading-room director and the title of the best punster in the class. Some of Archibald's witty sayings have become college-famous, and he is the especial friend of Kid Howard.

ARTHUR WILLIAM HIGGINS—truly a marvelously imposing name for such a modest, meek little fellow as “Chauncey” used to be. He is still quite sedate and proper, but Freshman “Chauncey” and Mr. Higgins of the present day are but distant cousins. In other words, Chauncey has blossomed out. Though they say that no good thing comes from Westfield, this excellent young man does not disdain to credit it with his nativity. The beginnings of his polished education were impressed upon him in a dainty little shanty with three windows and a fish-pole flag staff. As soon as he could tear himself away from this primitive institution he entered Westfield High School and graduated with flying colors. After a year of deliberation, Arthur decided to descend to the humble pursuit of agriculture, or more specifically horticulture. He has planted at his home “down on the farm” an embryonic floral establishment. As a Freshman he was elected to the Signal Board, and later to the board of reading-room directors. He is also a member of the editorial staff of this volume and a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity.

CLINTON KING. This little prodigy is surely an enigma. A glance at him would reveal nothing of especial importance. An ordinary man with—but stay! you wrong him. Rather short and slight is he, and though he is not bold, no ordinary mortal could have such stately stride; no ordinary man that eagle eye and noble air, that subtle power which made him sergeant of his class. A glance beneath the surface, and lo! we start with wonder.

“Such giant intellect no man has yet beheld;
A mind like those of yore, which fear and awe impelled.
We scarcely can believe a gift like this so rare,
In this great age of strife bestowed unto our care.”

He was born September 7, 1884, at Easton, Mass. This place he called his home until 1905, when the family moved to Dorchester. A P. G. course at the Oliver Ames High School gave him sufficient “prep” to join us. He entered a full-fledged Freshman and is just beginning to be appreciated. He is on the Signal and INDEX boards and a reading-room director. A member of Q. T. V.

JOSEPH ADELBERT LARNED. To form any sort of conception of this marvelous nature a great variety of circumstances must be considered. His brilliant career opened with his advent to the town of Colrain, Mass., on June 28, 1885. The fame of this precocious youth has attracted crowds of ambitious people to Colrain in the hope that they too may become bright. When two years of age he took his family to a more quiet and secluded home in Springfield. Soon after this his eager desire after worldly things caused him to lean so far out of an open window that he lost his balance, and after turning three somersaults in mid-air sat down on the sidewalk to rest. It is said that in the process of these gyrations his hair received an impetus to lengthen, which it has never fully overcome. We next find him in Pelham whence he completed a course in Amherst High School and then found his way to M. A. C. He is something of an athlete, and a "shark in math." He belongs to Q. T. V.

ERNEST AVERY LINCOLN. This is the boy—the veritable "Missing Link," although you would not imagine it to look at his placid countenance. Ernest hustled into the city of Fall River on October 24, 1883, just in time to avoid getting a half cut. Probably he was then in much the same state of mind as on that morning when he reported at Babby's recitation minus his necktie and his wits. Abe hung around Fall River until he got into the high school, and then he went up to Worcester Academy. Having an indefinite longing for the mysticism of the Chemical Lab. he came over the mountains to Mass'chusetts. Of late Link has departed from the chemical path and is now taking Math. However, he is quite liberal and is ready to discuss with you anything from the higher criticism to analytical geometry. He spent last summer studying the occult sciences with a fair but perverse cousin on the wooded shores of a distant New Hampshire lake. Lincoln played on the Freshman basketball team and belongs to the C. S. C. With this brief dissertation, we present him to you, a Link that binds together the class of 1907.

C. MORTON PARKER. It was on the 25th of February, 1884, at Newtonville, that our friend Parker, with fine determination and inextinguishable courage set out on the journey of life.

He readily overcame the obstacles which might have prevented his success, and graduated in the scientific course from the Newton High School. Realizing the advantages possessed by one who has attained to erudition in the science of Horticulture, he perambulated in the direction of the Massachusetts Agricultural College. Events have justified the choice he made. His prevailing modesty and fine discrimination in regard to values of knowledge obtained prompted him to remark on one occasion: "Owing to lack of sufficient preparation, I do not feel competent to recite upon the subject intelligently." He was a Burnham speaker in his Freshman year. In his Sophomore year he entered his eognomen on the roster of the Q. T. V. fraternity. His steady perseverance has lead to a good degree of scholarship, and gives us confidence that he will bring his course to a successful termination. In the opinion of his humble classmates, the truth is that he has a pull with Daddy Mills.

FREDERICK C. PETERS tells us that he was born September 20, 1884, at Lenox, in the heart of the good old Berkshires. He attended the Lenox schools and then went to Cushing Academy to study co-education and other minor subjects.

That he accomplished his purpose is attested by the fact that the mail service works overtime and such dainty letters arrive almost daily. Pete is all right for all his faults. He has made a specialty of basketball, playing guard on the varsity each year, and this winter he is to captain the five. He has also played substitute quarter on the football team each year and covered the initial bag on the class baseball team. As he has served the class as president for two years it is evident that he has given complete satisfaction. Other honors have been thrust upon Pete, namely, election to the Senate and Fraternity Conference. He is a member of Phi Sigma Kappa, and expects to travel in France in 1908.

HENRY TYLER PIERCE landed with a crash in the center of West Millbury on May 11, 1883. Ever since this first frantic effort to secure a grip on life, "Shorty" has had a perfect mania for grasping things. Not content with the course of study at M. A. C., it is his intention to go to Tech., and this is but a stepping-stone to a career as a mighty civil engineer in which high estate he may claim the admiration of the entire country. We can't help admiring his ambition. Shorty graduated with honors from the Millbury High School and then retired to the seclusion of his father's farm for four years. He did manage to break away just long enough to visit Saratoga and cast a cursory glance at the Pan-American Exposition. About a week before college opened in 1903 he chose to honor '07 with his presence. Since his arrival he has won the hearts of his classmates with his usual cupidity. He was a member of our famous ropepull and football teams, and is the class captain. Credit is also due him in connection with his services in the preparation of this mighty volume. He is a member of the C. S. C.

EDWARD HOUGHTEN SHAW. Somewhere on the map of Massachusetts is situated the town of Belmont. Where, we know not, but at any rate the subject of this sketch says he was born there on October 7, 1885. Eddie found this town so attractive that he has always remained there. He graduated from Belmont High School in 1903 and footed it out to Mass'chusetts. The long walk tired him so that he still appears rather sleepy. However, he played on the class football team both Freshman and Sophomore years, and also on the basketball team both years. He captained the baseball team his Freshman year. This youth, strange to relate, is a great "fusser," and also patronizes Uncle Sam's postal system to quite an extent. Eddie elected Horticulture and expects to make his future as a market gardener. He is a member of Phi Sigma Kappa.

JOHN NICHOLAS SUMMERS. When this bold warrior was consulted in regard to the extent of his achievements, he modestly replied: "I have done nothing of which to boast." Such seems to be the attitude of all great men toward their various accomplishments, and this in fact is one of the beauties of their natures. The first event of any importance in his life was his appearance as a real live "it," in Brockton, Mass., on January 25, 1884. He developed rapidly, and almost before he knew it had graduated from Brockton High School and come to M. A. C. for Horticulture. Early in his course he turned his back on "Hort." and took up the study of insects. We are told that he is especially interested in the Tomicus plastographus variety of the tribe Scolytidae of the Coleopterous race. Whatever this may mean, he alone can tell, but we rejoice that he has at last found his calling and heartily wish him the greatest possible success. As a member of our Sophomore rope-pull team, John gained great renown. He is a valuable football man and controls the purse strings of the class. A member of C. S. C.

CLIFFORD BRIGGS THOMPSON was born about October 2, 1884, in Halifax, down in the lake region of the Old Colony. After securing all the education available in that paradise of woodland, Halifax, Tommy entered the high school at Brockton. The location of the well-known Grover shoe factory in that city made a great impression in Clifford's mind and possibly accounts for the peculiar interest which he has developed in that name, but we fail to see why he should always connect Hamp. with that name. At length Tommy secured sufficient Math. to enter our college, and became one of this class. He has since secured the college championship as a "roughhouser" and was one of those who took the water cure in his Freshman year; but no pond is deep enough to drown his enthusiastic class spirit. He has elected Landscape Gardening, and undertook last summer, with the assistance of Pete and Mudge, to give people down to Boston points on the improvement of the Blue Hill Reservation. Thompson played on both of our class football teams, and has been a reading-room director. He is a member of the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity.

JAMES HENRY WALKER. On November 1, 1885, this individual strolled into Greenwich Village, a peaceful hamlet over beyond the Pelham hills. After a rather tumultuous youth, during which he managed to get through the Hardwich High School, James sought knowledge of the world beyond his valley home, and so one day he suddenly appeared in Amherst and became a member of the class of Naughty-seven. Here he has grown rapidly in body and mind, especially since he came under the influence of his roommate, "Mil" Clark. Billy had no terrors for him, and when that gentleman needed one to tackle a difficult proposition in Physics it was "Jim" every time. Now as a Junior he has elected Landscape and expects someday to practice his profession in the metropolis of Greenwich. Walker won his numerals on the class football team, and is affiliated with Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity. He is noted for his love of music and his abilities as an essayist. As the best of good fellows we gladly claim him as one of "our" class.

FRED ALEXANDER WATKINS tells us that he arrived in the city of Peru, Mass., one fine autumn morning about October 17, 1885. The elevated position of this metropolis led him to decide to make it his permanent abode. "Cy" attended the district school perched on the country hillside, and having heard of a great and mighty philosopher who once said "Round Tile is the best," he decided to join the class of 1906 at M. A. C. where this learned man discourses to his faithful followers. There is, however, a certain august body called the faculty, and these gentlemen decreed that our hero should join Naughty-seven, and so we found him among us at the beginning of Sophomore year. Watkins has now resolutely begun his elective course in "Wheat," and expects to go back to the Berkshires after graduation, armed with the magic tile which is round, to disseminate Brook's agriculture to the unenlightened citizens of Peru. "Cy" is no indifferent football player, having won his numerals by playing on the teams of the two classes to which he has belonged. He belongs to Phi Sigma Kappa and has the remarkable ability of always being "on the spot" when he is wanted. This tale would not be complete did we not recall that amusing episode when Watkins asked Professor Babson a question about Hawthorne's "Elsie Venner" and how in the outburst which followed the disgusted professor dismissed the class for insubordination.

RALPH JEROME WATTS. And what shall we say of our mascot, the one who has brought '07 her luck? When we first adopted "Shimmie" he was as frisky as an untrained colt fresh from the verdure of his native heath. Our unskilled judgment almost led us to reject him as unlikely, "but then," you see, "it's just like this":—he showed some signs of a brilliant future and we could not afford to lose him. Ere long we found to our great delight that he "would have been cheap at half the price." He has far surpassed our highest hopes and stands today one of the honored "wise boys" of the class. While we do not feel justified in calling him a professional fusser, it is quite evident to all that

"He truly hath a pleasing way
Which cannot be resisted."

The arrival of this distinguished personage was celebrated by a public holiday on the 2d of January, 1885, in Littleton, Mass. He graduated from the Littleton High School and came to us for his degree. Besides the honor of sporting his numerals he is assistant manager of the College Signal and a member of Phi Sigma Kappa.

HERBERT POLAND WOOD first began his noisy career in a secluded corner of South Attleboro, Mass., in August, 1883. In two years he had done that town and moved to Millbury, Mass. There he remained for fourteen years during which time he journeyed through the grammar and partly through the high school. He did many other things in Millbury but none of them will come up to his achievements in athletics. In '99 he drifted to Hopedale and there prepared for M. A. C. He entered bold and fresh with 1906, but owing to his desire for study and his honesty, he soon tired of them and joined the 1907 bunch at the beginning of our Sophomore year. He did wonderful things for us in football and basketball. He captained the latter team and succeeded in producing an excellent team under great disadvantages. He is a member of the C. S. C., and he had the courage to elect Chemistry for his Junior year.

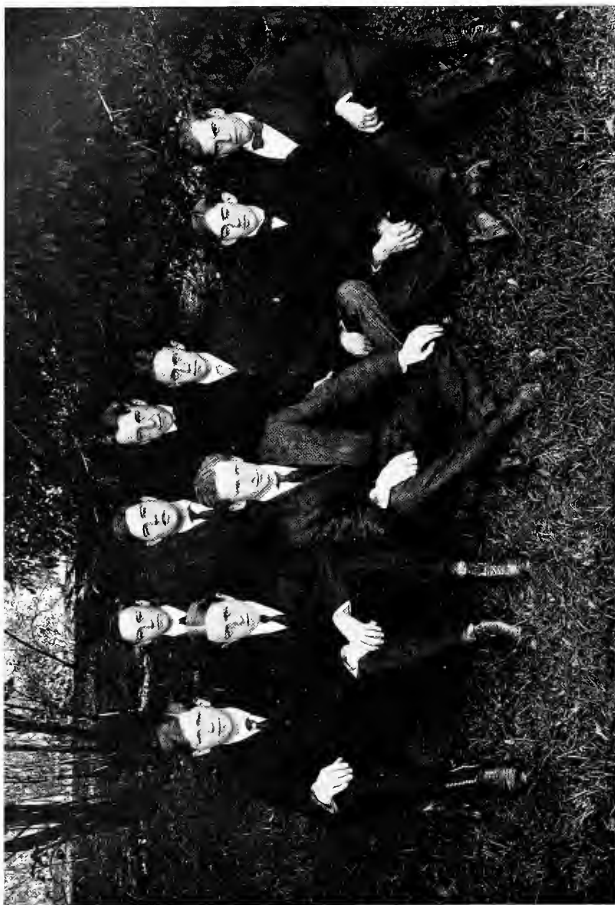

SUSIE DEARING LIVERS first saw the light of the world in Mendota, Illinois, on January 20, not so many years ago. When but a wee bit of a lassie she left her native hamlet for the "Sunny South."

Disgusted with the frivolity of the Spanish elements of the population she decided to return to the North. To Miss Livers no more cultured neighborhood appeared than that about the Hub, so she has since then resided within a three-mile radius of the gilded dome. After attending the Girls' High School the interests of agriculture led her to M. A. C. It is said that she intends to go to California after graduation, where a successful career as a poultry-raiser awaits her. The best wishes of the class of 1907 will accompany her.

ODAY the INDEX goes to press. For several weeks has the board been working conscientiously in the endeavor of producing a representative classbook. Day after day has the editor read and reread the copy, sometimes cheerfully, and again the wrinkles in his forehead would deepen, and with a smothered exclamation a piece of copy would be thrown in the waste paper basket. And all because he was trying to give everyone a square deal. It has been the policy of the board to be just to everyone—faculty and students alike. No ill-humored or malicious grinds were to be countenanced, and honors were to be distributed impartially. In short, the 1907 INDEX was to be a book to be read with pleasure.

And right here the Editor wishes to extend his personal thanks to all who have contributed in any way, either by suggestion, data or drawings. The Editor certainly appreciates the saying, "Every little bit helps," as no one else in college does.

In regard to the art department, the board has been especially fortunate in its artist, W. E. Dickinson, who has worked untiringly with his pencil and brush, often into the wee small hours of the morning, in order to produce a drawing on time. "Dick," the class extends its congratulations to you for the aid given us.

To E. T. Ladd, '05, the INDEX is also grateful for suggestions and drawings.

Our alumni list has been carefully revised this year with the assistance of Doctor Paige and Professor Howard, and to these gentlemen do we also extend our thanks.

As the hour approaches when all copy must be set up, a feeling of uneasiness creeps into the mind of the Editor. Is the book to be a success? Time will tell; but whether success or failure awaits our efforts, we feel as though we have done our best, considering the trying circumstances under which the board labored.

With a single suggestion to the readers, the Editor hands his pen to his valet to wipe—Be Charitable.

I stood upon the hill by the Botanic Museum one day in early spring and looked down upon the college which we call so fondly, "Old Mass'chusetts." All seemed so peaceful! In the sky above floated a few fleecy clouds as on one of those "rare days" in June. On the campus and the fields beyond lay the fast-melting snow, the last remnants of the retreating and vanquished forces of the Ice King. Beyond the college was the depression marking the course of the "Long River" on its way to the sea, and far beyond on all sides a barrier of lofty hills acted as a setting to the scene. Indeed this was a view approaching sublimity, and how ennobling and exhilarating to feel that you, yourself, were one of the student body at this educational institution enthroned among the eternal hills!

But as I descended the hill toward the college buildings I felt a new influence stealing over me. The very walks seemed to sound a warning. They were covered with water, and occasionally gave place to mires of slush and mud. Soon even a careless observer could see that something was wrong. A group of students appeared eagerly reading a newspaper and commenting upon what they read. Other groups in earnest and indignant tones were discussing some recent incident in college life. Instinctively all eyes were turned toward the college chapel where the faculty was in a star-chamber session. On all sides were heard scathing rebuke of the actions of that body. Not a word of arbitration or diplomacy. Not a single voice to cry, "Peace."

At length as the sun sank in rosy splendor behind the hills of Peru and Cummington and darkness began to descend upon the college, a body of men came out of the chapel. Gradually they broke up into groups and slowly wended their way home. The faces of some of these gentlemen were calm and stoical, others were flushed and angry, more were pained and sorrowful. But again there was no hope of settlement, no suggestion of a happier day when the Prince of Peace shall rule on earth. Self-interest, bigotry and hatred dominated on both sides of the controversy.

It is not pertinent to enter into the merits of this particular incident. It is closed and has been recorded in history. An attempt to reopen it would be both unwise and unfortunate. But the lesson which we should learn from it, the moral which it teaches, is painfully self-evident. There is no cooperation between the faculty of the Massachusetts Agricultural College and the undergraduates. Although both parties should work for the welfare of the college, it is a fact that when the slightest chance for a disagreement occurs, neither side will yield one iota until compelled by some arbitrary power to relinquish their claims. There is apparently little respect held on either side for the other, for we often find students treated like children and, on the other hand, it is indeed seldom that we do not hear the faculty arraigned for some real or fancied insult. These petty difficulties are abundant proof of Dryden's assertion that "Men are but children of a larger growth." It is wrong to suppose that any considerable number of the faculty are narrow-minded, and it is likewise the height of folly and misapprehension to suppose that we of the student body are looking for what is vulgarly called a "cinch," or are attempting to usurp the administration of college affairs.

Let us all in the future strive to work together for the advancement of the college with the least possible friction and a charity which shall cover the delinquencies of our co-laborers in the field of knowledge. Forgetting the trials of Today, let us face resolutely toward Tomorrow where the future of our college lies. Turning our eyes to Sugar Loaf and Tobey or Tom and Holyoke, let us raise our ideals to keep them company, thus giving to the college the full benefit of the moral influence of those things of beauty which Nature has so bountifully bestowed upon us. Then the faculty, "the powers that be," and the students, "the powers that are to be," will no longer clash in performing their labors, "neither shall they learn war any more."

The New Horticultural Building

With the completion of our new Horticultural building the attention of the public is called more forcibly than ever to this exceedingly important branch of agriculture. It is a department in which this college has long held a prominent position and in which it rightly should excel. Our natural facilities for experiment and demonstration together with the demand made by a large majority of the students for courses in Horticulture, Landscape Gardening, and Floriculture, indicate plainly that this institution may well be one of the best in the country. We have a strong department with the natural environment, and we rejoice to know that we are progressing materially on the way to a good equipment. The one great need still unsupplied is a commodious and up-to-date greenhouse. One who is in the least interested could not fail to note this fact on even the most casual inspection of our present quarters. However, we are thankful for little favors.

Wilder Hall is a building upon which we may rightfully look with pride. Of an artistic and practical design, it is so arranged that it presents no rear aspect. While the main entrance faces the east, the west door will be reached by a side approach from the botanic walk. A fine turf lawn will cover the slope down to the county road, thus setting off the building to its best advantage. The red brick exterior with terra cotta trimmings and a tile roof forms a very pleasing departure from the hitherto accepted standard. It is fireproof throughout.

The interior will contain but little woodwork. This will give an extremely neat appearance as well as aid in the matter of cleanliness. The arrangement is as follows: Basement floor—two classrooms, two laboratories, a large storage room, hat room, toilet room, and room for surveying instruments; main floor—two offices, record room, museum, laboratory, library, and loggia; upper floor—large drafting room and one classroom, also a photographing room with dark room and private laboratory. Thus we see that the necessities of the department are very well met.

Of course a college building is intended for practical use, but in this age of skilled specialties nothing but an agreeable structure should be tolerated. Mr. Willcox, the designer, has attained a happy combination of the practical with the æsthetic elements which is worthy of the true artist. Our present growth and prosperity necessitate the addition of accommodations. Let us use all our influence to further the tendency to make the buildings a credit to the institution and an added attraction to this most fortunate of college locations.

AT THE present time, as the annual meeting of the Trustees of the college draws near and with it the possibility of the election of a new president, every friend of the institution finds himself placed on the tiptoe of expectancy. There is a golden opportunity offered to benefit the college, for as it is the brain that directs and controls the human body so the executive powers in the college rest with the president. It is now a year since President Goodell was forced to forever cease his labors. For a year the college and everything connected with it has drifted on—a ship without a pilot, on a trackless sea. We can not expect an acting-president to do more than transact routine business, leaving the establishment of definite policies to the permanent executive. To illustrate: recently a member of the faculty was approached in regard to effecting a change in the course of study. His reply was: "Until a new president is elected, the faculty does not feel justified in making a change in the course of study or the policy of the institution." Although the selection of a new president is delegated to the Board of Trustees, it is pertinent for us to discuss the type of man needed for the office.

It would seem that a comparatively young man with experience in the executive control of an institution similar to our own, should be selected. Owing to the fact that educational ideals are changing so rapidly such an officer must be possessed of a progressive spirit that will advance with the times, although in so doing he may well follow the general lines which made the administration of Doctor Goodell so notable. We also suggest that this gentleman should be one who does not limit his connection with the college to his office hours or to those times when he is absent on official business. The students will have more respect and esteem for the president who appears at athletic contests and other student gatherings, not as an officious, "butting-in" member of the faculty, but as a friend and adviser. Every day we note that altogether too many of the faculty of our American colleges possess little tact or ability to get along with the students harmoniously. From that small number of men who can look at matters both from a faculty and student point of view our president should come.

When these conditions are fulfilled the INDEX believes we shall have the right man in the right place. It would be an extravagant statement to say that the college will then enter upon an entirely unprecedented period of prosperity and advancement. With a word of congratulation to Professor Brooks for his conscientious and arduous work, often under perplexing difficulties, as acting-president, the alumni, undergraduates and friends of the Massachusetts Agricultural College eagerly await the new executive. All hail the new president.

The Alumni

WHEN we consider the present location of these men who in the past have gone out from this college, we find them scattered from South Africa to the Hawaii, from Canada to Brazil. All are engaged in active, useful occupations, for the reason that very few Massachusetts men have had sufficient means to live a life of idleness and pleasure-seeking. Many of our alumni are engaged in farming or are superintendents of large estates; others are landscape gardeners, florists and market gardeners; some have become famous in the line of entomology, while a few have taken up a profession. It would be very interesting to follow out the occupations and positions of all, noting the variety of opportunities and lucrative positions open to graduates of this college, but this would require much time. That they have secured positions which compare favorably with those obtained by other trained men is incontestable.

Sometimes it is said, "But do these men ever remember their Alma Mater, to whom they owe so much? What are they doing to advance her interests?" When we come to look into the matter we see that our alumni have done a great deal—more than most of us realize. If we examine the accounts of the athletic association we find that a very material part of the money received by them has come from alumni subscriptions. If we look into college affairs we see that the alumni have taken part in many things. When troubles have arisen, they have come to the front and done all in their power to improve matters. The Western Alumni Association has recently offered a prize of twenty-five dollars each year to the member of the Sophomore class who has made the most marked improvement during his first two years. Although many of the men live in distant parts, yet we see a large number around college at Commencement and before important football games.

Thus we see that a great many of our alumni continue to take an active interest in the college, and are doing much for its advancement. That there are some, however, who seem lax in regard to this institution can not be denied. Neither is it those men who are in distant parts of the world. Men there are in the state of Massachusetts and in neighboring states who are not heard from year in and year out. Now Massachusetts needs the loyal support of every alumnus. We need your help in bringing good men to the college; we need your aid financially; but most of all we need your encouragement, your criticism and your approbation. We need to know that you are still interested in us; that you are working as we are working for the advancement of the college. Would that more alumni might keep in touch with us, subscribe to the college paper, and let us know their addresses and occupations, and thus all work together for the good of "Old Mass'chusetts."

The U. S. Cream Separator

Don't be influenced by general claims. FACTS are what you want. We have mentioned a few. Let us send you a free catalogue, which tells them all. It will surely interest you. Better write for it now you think of it. Address:

¶SKIMS THE MOST CREAM FROM THE MILK—Because its bowl (where the skimming is done) is really three bowls in one. A feature found in no other separator.

¶HOLDS THE WORLD'S RECORD FOR CLOSE SKIMMING.

¶RUNS SMOOTHEST AND EASIEST—Because the driving gears are enclosed, self-oiling and automatically supplied with fresh oil. No other separator has all these advantages.

¶IS EASIEST AND QUICKEST WASHED—Because there are only two simple parts inside the bowl, and because the bowl is wide enough to be easily cleaned. Other separators have from 5 to 45 inside parts, or are long and narrow like a gun barrel.

¶IS MOST CONVENIENT—Because the top of the milk supply-tank is about as high as the operator's waist, making it easy to fill. This means labor saved.

¶LASTS LONGEST—Because there are ball bearings at all high speed points. Because it is built only of carefully-selected, high-grade materials. Because the parts are few, simple and easy to get at.

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

A rare chance to obtain a thoroughly practical education. The cost has been reduced to a minimum. Tuition is free to citizens of the United States. An opportunity is offered to pay a portion of expenses by work.

Six courses of study are offered: eleven weeks' courses in dairy farming and horticulture; a two weeks' course in bee culture; a four years' course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science; a two years' course in horticulture for women; a graduate course leading to the degrees of Master of Science and Doctor of Philosophy.

In the Freshman and Sophomore years of the four years' course the following subjects are taught: agriculture, botany, horticulture, chemistry, anatomy and physiology, zoology, algebra, geometry, trigonometry, surveying, physics, English, French, German, history and military tactics. For the Junior year a student may elect one of the following six courses:

FIRST SEMESTER	SECOND SEMESTER	FIRST SEMESTER	SECOND SEMESTER
Course in Agriculture	Agriculture Botany Chemistry Geology Horticulture English	Course in Chemistry	Chemistry Agriculture Mathematics Geology English Special Subject
Course in Horticulture	Horticulture Botany Chemistry Geology English	Course in Mathematics	Analytical Geometry Engineering Free-Hand Drawing Landscape Gardening Geology English
Course in Biology	Zoology Botany Chemistry Geology Horticulture English	Course in Landscape Gardening	Landscape Gardening Agriculture Botany Mechanical Drawing Engineering Entomology Economics

In the Senior year bacteriology, Constitution of the United States and military science are required during the first semester, and Constitution of the United States and military science during the second semester. In addition to

JANUARY 25.—More tests

JANUARY 26.—Still more tests

these the student must take three courses elected from the following and closely correlated with his Junior year course. Only one course in language can be elected.

AGRICULTURE	ENTOMOLOGY	ENGLISH
HORTICULTURE	CHEMISTRY	FRENCH
VETERINARY	PHYSICS	GERMAN
BOTANY	ENGINEERING	LATIN
	LANDSCAPE GARDENING

Facilities for illustrating subjects of study include a working library of 20,000 volumes, properly classified and catalogued; the State collection of birds, insects, reptiles and rocks of Massachusetts, with many additions; the Knowlton herbarium of 10,000 species of named botanical specimens; the 1500 species and varieties of plants and types of the vegetable kingdom, cultivated in the Durfee plant house; the large collections of Amherst College within easy access; a farm of about 400 acres, divided between the agricultural, horticultural, and experimental departments, embracing every variety of soil, and offering splendid opportunities for observing the application of science to the problems of agriculture.

Worthy of especial mention are the laboratories for practical work in agriculture, in chemistry, in zoölogy, in entomology, and in botany, well equipped with essential apparatus. The Durfee plant house has been recently rebuilt and greatly enlarged, and a new tool-house and workshop provided for the horticultural department. For the agricultural department a model barn furnishes the best facilities for storage of crops, care of horses, cattle, sheep and swine, and management of the dairy; it includes also a lecture-room for instruction. For the veterinary department a new and fully-equipped laboratory and stable have been provided, where bacteriology and the diseases of animals are studied.

EXPENSES. Board in the dining hall is $3.25 per week, and in families from $3.00 to $5.00; room rent, $9.00 to $21.00 per semester; heat and light, $12.00 per semester; washing, 40 to 50 cents per dozen; military suit, $15.75; books at wholesale prices; furniture, second-hand or new, for sale in town.

Certificates from approved high schools admit students without examination.

Requisites for admission to the several courses and other information may be learned from the catalogue, to be obtained by application to the Acting President.
